DAILY RECORD

WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 26, 1873,

THE BENEFIT LAST NIGHT .- The prevailing liberality of our people was exemplified tast night by a full house at Brown's Hall for the benefit of the family of the late Wm. F. Gorman, The evening's entertainment was opened by a piano solo by M. Levin. This was followed by a quartette by the Pioche Glee Club. Mrs. Kasten next sang most Solution of the control of the evening is applicated. The feature of the evening is entertainment, however, was the lecture of high order of eloquence. The them was one which evidently touched the speaker's heart. He felt that he was speaking in behalf of a charitable object, and he threw his whole soul into the subject. His lecture was listened to with profound attention, and at the close of his remarks he was rapturously applanded. The lecture of Mr. Bishop was followed by a song of Mrs. J. R. Pedlar. Dutch Eccentricities by Henry G. Brown were well received. But the most pleasing and interesting ballad was the "Little Widow," sang so sweetly by Mrs. Kasten. David Newman sang a comic song with good effect. John Yule read, in happy style, "Tam O'Shanter." The whole entertainment closed with exercises with the Indian war clubs by T. R. Butler. Taken altogether, the audience was pleasantly entertained, and what is more, the family of the late Mr. Gorman received a substantial benefit.

Sidewalk.— Public-spirited parties have awakened to the necessity of constructing a sidewalk from the centre of town towards the Court House. It is a great convenience to the people, and we only regret that it has not been extended further towards the west end.

Brathfull. Weather.—A stoic could not growl at the weather in Pioche now.

There was a heavy snow storm a few days ago, rendering the air very cool, but yesterday and the day before the sun whats out brightly, and it seemed as the court has a store to such that the sun of the Six popular. READY WIT.—There is a good story old of H. J. Byron, the English dramaness of his wit. He was invited on one occasion to the house of F. C. Burnand, also a playwright, to participath in some charades, to be given for the benefit of a large number of fashionable people. By-ron was announced as third on the pro-gramme, but when the first act was over it was discovered that he had as yet made no preparation for his part of the show. Therefore Bernand went to him and pound at n19-ti psi', from o31 said, "Come, Byron, hurry and arrange something; we will be really for you in a few minutes. Byron started out of the room to "look something up." Ha proceeded to the nursery where he found a child's rocking-horse made of pine wood, or, as the English call it, deal. This he ordered to the taken down stairs and placed on the English call it, deal. This he ordered to be taken down stairs, and placed on the stage, immediately behind the curtain, as the second piece was already over. When the curtain was rung up, there he was standing beside the horse in an attitude that would have done credit to a circus-master. "Ladies and gentlemen," said he, pointing to the horse, "this represents one of the islands in the Greek Archipelago, Del-os." Then the curtain came down and the audience "convulsed." But this was not all. The curtain went up again, and Byron stepping forward said: "Ladies and gentlemen, another island in the Greek Archipelago, Sam-os." As an example of unpremeditated wit, this would be hard to beat.

Dr. Livingstone. — Reports of the compulsory detention of Dr. Livingstone as a prisoner in Western Africa, have appeared in our exchanges lately. The following from the London Times, is the blood of the people boiling. We are confident that nobody had an adequate idea, prior to this exposure, of the are confident that nobody had an adequate idea, prior to this exposure, of the attent to which torture and abuse are practiced in the American mercantile marine. In fact, the instances of humane treatment would seem to be the exception rather than the rule, and one can almost believe that negro slavery being abolished, the traditional plantation overseer has changed his occupation, and taken to the merchant service in the capacity of captain or mate, as the only pacity of captain or mate, as the only field which offered an opportunity for the gratification of his old slave driving pro-

Humboldt Times of November 8th has the following in regard to the Northern diamond fields, whose previous brief an-nouncement caused so much excitement. That singular phenomenon, the floating island of Lonadale, L. I., has again been moved, the strong wind from the south that prevailed a few days ago having brought it back to its former position on the north side of Scott pond.

BATTLE OF SALINAS.—A Joion correspondent of the Sants Cruz (Cal.) Sentinel writes as follows: "I arrived in the town of Monterey on the 2d of October, 1843, in the Mexican schooner Soledad, and left her there." The battle of the Salinas was fought on the 19th of November, 1846, and the day Col. Fremont marched out of Monterey, was on the 20th, 1846, for he was not in the fight himself, though some of his men were; that is to say, the men who were coming down the country to join him. Captain that is to say, the men who were coming down the country to join him. Captain Foster, his Lieutenant, and eleven others, were killed in the oaks. On the evening of the day Col. Fremont's command left Monterey, Capt. Maddox sent around a patrol and took all the liquor from the saloons, with the exception of Don Jose Abrego's, Watson's and Job F. Dye's, I speak feelingly of this subject, as the liquor was not so strong when it was returned as it was before it went; and it lost in quantity as well as in onality by lost in quantity as well as in quality by the journey."

The battle of the Salinas was the only disastrous fight, in California, during the struggle for American rule. On the 8th of January, 1847, the battle of the Mesa was fought, and San Gabriel on the 9th, was fought, and San Gabriel on the 9th, which gave the Americans possession of Los Angeles and all Southern California. About the 27th of January, General Kearney arrived, and fought the battle or siege of San Pascual, which ended the contest and restored peace. General Castro surendezed in Auril 1847. tre surrendered in April, 1847.

THE result of the suit brought in this city, by a colored man, to recover $299 damages against a saloon-keeeper, who refused, because of his color, to sell him a drink of intoxicating liquor, is awaited with interest by the civilized world. Our with interest by the civilized world. Our feelings of propriety, the traditional ideas of Caucasian dignity, and even the idea that this is a white man's country, would be seriously wounded by a decis-tion that the two colors may get drunk together. It is proper enough that the white and black should be bred together, that they should have the same nurse. white and black should be bred together, that they should have the same nurse, that they should use the same milk bottle, that they should go to the polls together, that they should go to heaven together; that they should go to heaven together; but as to their drinking gin together—that is too much. Let us be saved from such a violation of our most sacred traditions.—[S. F. Alta.
